HONGKONG, MAY 23rd, 1923.

This need for railways in the Chinese Empire as adjuncts to the splendid natural waterways with which the country is provided is again being brought home to the governing authorities by the famine in Shansi.

Remote from the coast, and not accessible by a river like the Yangtze, Shansi is in times of dearth cut off from the centres whence its necessities might otherwise be supplied. Long before food or grain could be conveyed, by the usual slow process on the backs of coolies, the persons requiring it might cease to do so by reason of their having ceased to exist, the terrible struggle for life ending in starvation in their slow starvation. As we have pointed out on numerous occasions, the obvious duty of the Chinese Government, when undertaking the work of railway construction, is to first make lines to districts which are isolated from the coast or are unprovided with navigable rivers. Perhaps no part of the empire more needs this means of communication than the provinces of the north-west, and it is noteworthy that they are entirely omitted from the scheme for a system of trunk railways sanctioned by the Imperial Government.

In that project the dominating idea was from the outset the provision of a system of strategic railways that could be used for repelling any foreign attack or for suppressing any internal outbreak. The requirements of trade, the movements of population, or the relief of distress were matters which gave no anxiety to the Peking mandarins, and equally claimed no attention from the provincial officials who ought to have been concerned. The first named felt no interest in anything but defence against the presumed aggressive foreigner; the latter were systematically hostile to the proposed innovation unless it promised to afford a very substantial squeeze.

If, however, the Peking correspondent of our Shanghai morning contemporary is to be relied on, His Imperial Majesty the Emperor Kwang Su has been impressed with the need for improved means of communication by the incident of the Shansi famine. Upon being informed by the President of the Board of Revenue that the cost of the transport of rice from Peking to Kwai-hsi-cheng was two taels per picul, although the distance is inconsiderable, His Majesty is reported to have exclaimed:—
"Oh! what a pity it is we have no railways!"

There, not only would transport then "cost almost nothing, but we might avoid "having famines altogether." And what a pity, we might add, it is that the Emperor has not the power with which he is credited as Son of Heaven, so that he might direct a work to be carried out at once so soon as it is necessary, while awaiting as a matter of fact, however, the Emperor of China, like the Queen of England, reigns but does not rule, and it is infinitely more difficult to set in motion the machinery of administration in the Central Kingdom than it is in the most bureaucratically governed country of the West. Nevertheless it is satisfactory to hear that the young Imperial resolute at Peking is in favour of the introduction of such a progressive institution as the railway. His advocacy may not be so powerful as that of, say, the Viceroy of Cihli, but if the officials become aware that the iron rod is viewed with special favour at the Court in Peking the fact may serve to dissipate some prejudice if it does not overcome the opposition kept up for more than a century. In the last named cause lies the secret of the delay in the construction of the long projected line from Kowloon to Canton, the first southern section of the great trunk line to Peking. The Imperial sanction to this section was given more than two years ago, and a company was projected to undertake its immediate construction, but the greed of some officials blocked the way, and the scheme was performed temporarily abandoned. It is rumored that there is more disposition now on the part of the mandarin to help forward the enterprise, but it is possible that the enthusiasm of the capitalists concerned has cooled in the meantime.

The Chinese Imperial Government are certainly more inclined than they were to tolerate and even to patronise the railway, having now seen somewhat of its advantages in the North, but there is nothing to show that they are any more prepared to allow the employment of foreign capital in such undertakings. Of course this is much to be regretted, because it serves to materially delay the progress of the development of the resources and capabilities and trade of the country; but it would be quite sufficient to satisfy the friends of civilisation and advancement if China would take up the work on a more after the fashion of Japan, which country now possesses a very excellent system of railways, uniting most of the great centres of industry and production throughout the chief island of the group. At the present rate of progress China will take some decades to accomplish as much, and there is the probability that the least desirable and least useful sections will be constructed first. This fact is calculated to tell against the progress of the work, inasmuch as lines such as that to Shansi kwan are not likely to yield good dividends on the capital, at least until the country through which they pass has become developed by the opening of mines or the cultivation of waste lands. A Chinese rumour is said to be current in Shanghai to the effect that the Peking Government are prepared, rather than concede the demand for the opening up of Hunan, to allow the laying down of railways from Shanghai in any direction within the thirty mile radius, and if there be any truth in the report it is certainly indicative of a very marked advancement in the prejudice against the iron road.

Supporting this to be the case, now is the time for the promoters of the Kowloon-Canton Railway to renew their application for the concession to build that railroad.

It has been urged that the line cannot provide remuneration because it cannot compete with the carriage by water, but it is only necessary to point to the success of the railway in Burma which has yet in no way diminished the profits of the Irrawaddy Flot-tilla Company. Moreover, the Kowloon-Canton line would pass districts away from the river, and the railway itself would only form the first section of the line to Hankow, and thence northward to the capital. It will inevitably be constructed—some day, and whenever made must prove of enormous commercial benefit to South China, in which this colony will largely participate.

The O. S. Co. steamship Providence left Singapore on the evening of the 20th inst. for this port.

Mr. F. H. May has been confirmed in the appointment of Captain Superintendent of the late General Gordon.

It will be noticed that the Empress of Japan, sailing west to-morrow at noon, is to call at Hongkong in addition to the usual ports touched at by the Company's steamers.

The P. M. City of Rio de Janeiro, which sailed about April 27th for San Francisco via Panama, Kobe, Yokohama, and Yokohama, arrived at her destination on the 20th inst.

The gloominess in the Botanic Gardens are now about at their best, and from a splendid display of millions of roses, of that country, a display known to the police, at Shaukiwan, a few days ago. A verdict of "found drowned" was returned.

An enquiry was held by Mr. H. M. Wodehouse yesterday at the Magistrate's regarding the finding of the body of a man, who was known to the police, at Shaukiwan, a few days
ago. A verdict of "found drowned" was returned.

The Pacific Mail S. S. Co.'s extra steamer
City of New York will sail from San Francisco on the 25th inst. for Hongkong, and will leave Hongkong for San Francisco on the 28th inst.
Kobe, Yokohama, and Yokohama, and Honolulu on July 12th.

In an advertisement column will be found a notice calling attention to the facilities offered by the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. for short trips to Japan during the summer months in their famous Empress. The trip to Kobe and back is to occupy fourteen days and the opportunity should prove a great attraction to those who wish for a change, but who have a limited time only at their disposal.

The minimum price of the Hongkong Loan was fixed at 2/3. This London and China Express carried high, but the price rose, and as we were informed by telegram, was 2/10 1/2.

In noting the prospectus our contemporary made the following remarks:—It is intended to offer holders of existing securities of the Hongkong Government an opportunity of conversion into Inscribed Stock identical with this issue.
It is expressly pointed out that the revenues of the colony of Hongkong alone are liable in respect of the Stock, and the Commissioned of the United Kingdom and H.M.'s Treasury are not liable. The colony is, however, quite thoroughly able to meet such an amount, though the wisdom of having a railway loan for a silver currency colony at such a time is, as we have stated on a previous occasion, (24) likewise somewhat doubtful. The minimum price of the existing 4 per cent. loan is quoted 102 1/2.

If this is considered the market value at 4 per cent. interest a loan at 3 per cent. at 88 is high, but it would be pleasant to see that the colony can get the money at this price. With the prospectus is issued a Statistical Statement relative to the Public Debt, Revenue, and Expenditure of the colony from 1882 to 1922.

This shows the present outstanding indebtedness of the colony to be £1,600,000.

During the heavy thunderstorm on Saturday night a boatman on a canoe at the Harbour Office was struck by lightning and fatally killed. Five other persons on board escaped unhurt, and the boat itself was not damaged.

The following appears in the Daily Graphic:—
"Much has been said and written about the use of photography as an aid to the detection of criminals, and a song on the subject sung by Mr. Dan Leno, lately had a vogue at the man-icallia. A curious instance of the use of the camera is furnished by one of our own recent illustrations. We lately published a photograph of a Chinese execution. It appears that one of the spectators who assisted at the performance was a corporal in a regiment then stationed at Hongkong, who had asked and been refused permission to attend the execution. The same photograph came under the notice of this corporal's colonel. By the aid of a magnifying glass, a correspondent informs us, the colonel recognised the features of the individual, "nonsuum" and was consequently enabled to identify the cause of discipline.

One of the results of the importation of rice in bulk at Calcutta, says the Times of India, is that ten American gallons of good lamp oil may now be bought for Rs. 2-3, the purchase price of the rice being Rs. 1-10. The rice is exported to hold ten American gallons. It is said that the same result in Bombay, we may look forward to greatly increased consumption of petroleum, not only for lighting, but for cooking and for motive power. The engine, in which oil is used, is making steady progress, even in the most remote parts of the country. We may, therefore, expect that for some time to come, the use of kerosene for lighting industries such as railroads, small water-mills, wood working, and for small electric light installations, will be found to have many suitable kinds of employment. We have heard that the year or two ago one basis for estimating the cost of lighting districts several times. An import drop in the price of kerosene would not only benefit the consumer, but also the producer of electric light in small installations.

thoroughly able to meet such an amount,
loan for a silver currency colony at such a time
is, as we have stated on a previous occasion, (24) likewise somewhat doubtful. The minimum price of the existing 4 per cent. loan is quoted 102 1/2.

If this is considered the market value at 4 per cent. interest a loan at 3 per cent. at 88 is high,
but it would be pleasant to see that the colony
can get the money at this price. With the prospectus is issued a Statistical Statement relative
of the colony from 1882 to 1922.

This shows the present outstanding
indebtedness of the colony to be £1,600,000.

During the heavy thunderstorm on Saturday
night a boatman on a canoe at the Harbour Office was struck by lightning and
not damaged.

criminals, and a song on the subject sung by Mr. Dan Leno, lately had a vogue at the man-
camera is furnished by one of our own recent
of a Chinese execution. It appears that one of
mission to attend the execution. The same
the cause of discipline.

rice in bulk at Calcutta, says the Times of India,
price of the rice being Rs. 1-10. The rice is exported to hold ten American gallons. It
is said that the same result in Bombay,
consumption of petroleum, not only for lighting,
time to come, the use of kerosene for lighting
industries such as railroads, small water-mills,
wood working, and for small electric light in-
electric light in small installations.

advantages in the North, but there is
out the chief island of the group. At the
through which they pass has become de-
tivation of waste lands. A Chinese rumour
ment in the prejudice against the iron road.

time for the promoters of the Kowloon-
for the concession to build that railroad.

necessary to point to the success of the railway in Burma which has yet in no way
diminished the profits of the Irrawaddy Flot-
form the first section of the line to Hankow,
will inevitably be constructed—some day,
